

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 11, 2010

Faithful Transitions Blog: Recommended Educational Ministries

Steven King

We continue to receive requests for recommendations on educational ministries that are trustworthy and faithful, apart from denominational structures. The WordAlone Ministries has developed a number of cooperative partnerships with organizations and ministry agencies that are doing fine work.

The list below is not exhaustive, but it provides a starting point. Not only do we recommend the financial support of these ministries, but more importantly, we encourage churches and individuals to make use of the resources and services provided by these ministries. Please visit their websites.

Educational Ministries

There are a number of faithful alternatives to support educational and publishing ministries, including direct partners of WordAlone Network, as well as other independent publishers.

Sola Publishing (www.solapublishing.org)

ReClaim Resources (www.reclaimresources.org)

Faith Inkubators (www.faithink.com)

Concordia Publishing House (www.cph.org)

Bible-Alive Ministries (www.bible-aliveministries.com)

and Connections Magazine

Youth and Family Ministries

A number of faithful para-church organizations directly serve in youth and family ministries. In addition to national organizations, there are many local outdoor ministries that congregations may choose to support.

Youth Encounter (www.youthencounter.org)

Exodus International (www.exodusinternational.org)

Mount Carmel Ministries (www.mountcarmelministries.com)

Pastoral and Lay Ministry Training

An important area for cooperative support is in the area of supporting seminary instruction for new pastors and lay ministers. This may be done through supporting a faithful entity or institution, or through individual sponsorship of orthodox students.

Institute of Lutheran Theology (www.ilt.org)

Beyond the River Academy (www.beyondtheriveracademy.org)

(From Faithful Transitions Blog - <http://faithfultransition.blogspot.com/>)